

By Your Side
Owen Danoff

In times like these, I feel so small
We're just riding on a world that's a wrecking ball
It swings around and tears us down for no reason at all
And all I know is you can't let go
The air is so still, it must be true
Something comes for me and comes for you
All these years to face our fears and they still break through Creeping into our bones when we're all alone

When the day gives way to darkness
And there's a sea behind your eyes
Before those tears of fear and hardness fall
Call me, and I'll be by your side

Gravity, reality
I'd rather something that we need
A little lightness, help us fight this tragedy
But you know you've got to hold on tight to what feels right

When the day gives way to darkness
And there's a sea behind your eyes
Before those tears of fear and hardness fall
Call me, and I'll be by your side

This calendar of desperate days
All these bloody pages of uncertain ages
Make me scared I can't help to change it
But what I can do is be there for you

When those days give way to darkness
And there's a sea behind your eyes
Before those tears of fear and hardness fall
Call me
When the day gives way to darkness
And there's a sea behind your eyes
Before those tears of fear and hardness fall
Call me, and I'll be by your side
